Title: Blind Sub-Nyquist Wideband Spectrum Sensing in Cognitive Radio

Tools and Technologies used: Matlab with C programming

Brief Description: This project is developed in order to reduce the Spectrum scarcity issue. A spectrum scarcity problem has been emerged due to the increasing demand for new spectral bands and the underutilization of those already allocated Cognitive radios are designed to be aware of the conditions they operate within the availability of both licensed spectrum and spectrum licensed to other operators. But in CR, spectrum sensing and detection is a crucial task. Cognitive radio is an advanced software defined radio that automatically detects its surrounding RF stimuli and intelligently adapts its operating parameters to network infrastructure while meeting user demands.
